The United Nations General Assembly designated 11 December “International Mountain Day (IMD)”. As of 2003, it has been observed every year to create awareness about the importance of mountains to life, to highlight the opportunities and constraints in mountain development and to build alliances that will bring positive change to mountain peoples and environments around the world.

IMD celebrations are coordinated by the Mountain Partnership Secretariat (www.mountainpartnership.org) under the Food and Agriculture organization of the United Nations.

For the first time IMD was celebrated in the State of Utah in 2010 through the efforts of students and faculty at Utah Valley University (UVU). UVU joined Mountain Partnership in 2006. Since that time UVU celebrated IMD every year with involvement of other members of the Mountain Partnership from North America and around the world. This year IMD celebrations are hosted at University of Utah in order to raise an awareness about importance of the sustainable mountain development agenda of the United Nations among the students and faculty at UofU.
